ERRATUM

An error was made in Thursday's Daily in that an editorial on the pressmen's strike in New York City should have been credited to the Birmingham Post, from which paper it was taken.

There is one good thing about them, the automobiles have rubber instead of iron wheels.

If a final and satisfactory agreement as to what constitutes good sportsmanship could be reached what a happy world would result.

The Wyoming railroad wreck was one of the most thoroughgoing accomplishments of modern times.

Moving day here was known only by the report of the calendar. A good evidence that everybody is pretty well satisfied after all.

Mr. Bryan's home state, Nebraska, is inclined to be very wet. So who could blame William for moving to Florida?

REPAIR THE

Ex-Mayor E. C. Payne in a recent communication to The Daily called attention to the condition of the roadway from this city leading to Hartselle and the Somerville pike. This roadway is rapidly going to pieces and if repairs are not undertaken at once little will be left of the roadway that was constructed a few years ago at a heavy expense. Heavy traffic goes on every day over this line of travel and if repairs are not undertaken at once little will be left of what has been a splendid roadway in a comparatively short time.

TO IMPROVE COTTON REPORTING.

Senator Haris, of Georgia, has given out word that when Congress meets he proposes to see what can be done in the matter of securing a more reliable report on the stocks of "spinnable and unspinnable cotton" on hand throughout the world. His contemplated move has brought from Secretary Hoover an expressed hope that "something can be done at the next session to improve the whole situation." No doubt the Secretary had in mind the complaints made against the Government's crop reporting system, and one particular break made in the early part of the season. The Secretary's hope gives encouragement to the belief that some sort of plan has been under consideration to simplify the cotton reporting system, for by no other means could "the whole situation" be improved. A fine improvement might be instituted if 50 percent of the reports now being sent out are cut off, and the reporting bureau force reduced to a small group of men who know their business.—Selma Times Journal.

WHAT IS A KING?
ASK KING GEORGE

King George of Greece, miserable with the burden of his crown, concludes:
"It's a rotten job being a king. I have tried it for years, so I know."

We have had a hunch that kings are not to be envied their jobs. Others besides the King of Greece have felt that "a crown, golden in show, is but a wreath of thorns, brings dangers, troubles, cares and sleepless nights to him who wears the regal diadem."

Yet, despite the inconvenience of sitting on a throne, kings sit pretty tight. They do not show a disposition to give the crown to someone else, not while they can hold onto it.

We admit it must be a hard life. Perhaps it is a worse job than King George said it is. But it is not kingly in him to holler and complain so that all the world can hear. It is a king's business to be able to carry heavy burdens.

It is a human weakness that people complain about their lot. They don't seem to think when up against a tough proposition that his job in life is rotten. There is nothing to improve a difficult situation, in complaint, in bewailing fate or whatever it is that makes life rough. No one cares to have us tell him we have a bum time of it. We like to hear the fellow who faces his tasks without moaning, who makes a good job out of a bad one. There is the kingly man.—Omaha World Herald.

WILL MY LADY NICOTINE NEXT BE UNDER THE BAN OF THE LAW?

Are American people carrying their use of tobacco to such an extent that it will next be made the bone of contention in a reformation wave? The opinion appears to be gathering strength that like liquor, tobacco may be made a moral issue with the result that its use will be prohibited or greatly curtailed by law. Such a thing is not an impossibility.

Writing in the Memphis Commercial Appeal, former Governor Malcolm R. Patterson, of Tennessee, sounds a note of warning to tobacco growers and manufacturers that they may have to fight the growing sentiment against tobacco abuses just as distillers and brewers had to fight when the people became disgusted with liquor abuses.

The use of tobacco is increasing at a surprising rate. The "habit" is fastening itself upon women as well as men. The cigarette as a social requisite has become a fixture in polite society. Once its use by women was confined to the demi-monde; now, especially in large cities and at fashionable resorts, women of the exclusive set, old and young, indulge freely. It no longer is considered a protection to women to have signs in public places against smoking. The woman who objects to tobacco smoke is the exception.

Former Governor Patterson sees the growth of the anti-tobacco crusade until the use of the "weed" may be as unlawful as the use of liquor now is. He says:

We are now using tobacco like we used liquor to excess, and unless the people are tired of reformation by law we are likely to have a crusade against Lady Nicotine, just as we had against her bloated uncle, old John Barleycorn.

The manufacturers of tobacco may be pursuing too much the same course as the distillers and brewers, and if they are not careful to heed warnings they may find themselves in the same legal predicament.

According to reports of the internal revenue bureau, taxes were paid in July, 1923, on 5,837,707,747 cigarettes, an increase of nearly 600,000,000 over July, 1922.

On cigars revenue was collected on 589,176,020 large cigars and 42,341,000 small cigars, an increase of something like 9,000,000 over July, 1922.

If all these cigarettes and cigars were consumed by our own population it would keep the men, women and children of the country chiefly occupied in smoking and there would be little time left for anything else. We would all be human funnels.

In the meantime, inspired by these figures, and holding that tobacco is as bad or worse than liquor, an association has been formed to put tobacco with liquor under the ban of the law.

Whether it succeeds or not, the attempt will be made, and it may have a large support.

The time hasn't come yet to lay in a supply of cigarettes and cigars, but what has happened may happen again.

The matter may well be regarded seriously. That there is harm in the excessive use of tobacco does liquor, but it unquestionably enslaves, so, there is no question. It does not demoralize as does liquor, but it unquestionable enslaves. Perhaps we are going a little too strong on cigars, cigarettes and the faithful old pipe, and right here may be the chief trouble—we are too much inclined to abandon the pipe for the more seductive forms of tobacco use. So long as one sticks to the pipe he is lending little encouragement to the anti-tobacco sentiment, if he does not carry the thing too far. For one thing, the society leader of the feminine persuasion will not be likely to use the pipe as she now does the cigarette, and pipe smoke, being a bit strong, would not be welcomed in places where now cigarette and cigar smoke may hang heavily, without causing protest.

But it cannot be disputed that an occasional cigarette for one who likes them, or an occasional cigar for the men who prefer a longer, stronger smoke, is soothing and pleasant, just as the faithful pipe is a solace. It might be a good plan for tobacco users to take notice and put the brakes on going so fast in the pursuit of smoke joys. Better a curtailed use than a total absence.—Anniston Star.

"A strapping big fellow the other day brought a demure little lass to the parsonage in order that they might be joined in the bonds of matrimony.

New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Human beings are to be put to shame by home-going animals. The unique place of the pigeon is unique no longer. For the homing hop-toad has come to the fore. F. H. Sydney, naturalist, discovered in this humble animal what he believed to be proof of the homing instinct, and is now testing it out. A month ago, he released at the Grand Central station here a little hop-toad he had brought from Minneapolis, with a tag on his left leg, reading "Mickey, bound for Minneapolis." He was reported at Niagara Falls and then all trace of him vanished until just now word has come to Mr. Sydney that Mickey has reached Chicago. Not until he reaches his own doorstep in Minneapolis will the naturalist state his contention proved, but it certainly looks as if Mickey were properly on his way.

Leo Breverman, twelve years old, has had to give up active management of his own restaurant in order to go back to school, but the eating place still flourishes under his watchful eye on Seventh Avenue. Leo is by many years our most youthful restaurateur, but regardless of the scoffing of playmates and parents he established his restaurant, employed his own help, insisted on good service to his patrons and looked carefully after his profits throughout his whole vacation time. "They were grown-ups, too, that ate there," he emphasized.

If Dr. Pease and the Anti-Tobacco Society, in the course of their new drive for membership happen to strike any men who were passengers aboard the liner Pittsburgh on the last arrival here, it is going to be a sad occasion for the Doctor. I am afraid. Prohibition of tobacco is one thing that the majority of those passengers are in a mood to be most testy on. For two solid days before the steamer docked, there wasn't a cigarette or cigar on board. Some one had miscalculated when laying in the ship's provisions and private stocks were insufficient to last.

Undoubtedly the greatest shock Manhattan got from the rodeo Tex Rickard brought on for the Madison Square Garden was the sight of real cowboys from Wyoming, riding as New York never knew people could ride, wearing horn-trimmed spectacles. Two of them did it.

Eleanora Duse is scheduled to arrive in New York on October 16, according to the announcement made by Morris Gest, and will give the first of her ten New York performances on Monday night, October 22, at the Metropolitan Opera House. The remaining nine performances will be staged at the Century Theatre at matinees.

Mme. Duse will present "Ghosts" and "The Lady from the Sea" by Ibsen.

"The Dead City," by Gabrielle d'Annunzio, "The Closed Door," by Marco Praga, and "Thy Will Be Done," by Gallarati Scotti. After the New York engagement, she will visit four other cities.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—In the various Bohemian sections of the town, the small householders have community caretakers, and many are the duties which fall to the odd job men. They clip the tiny hedges in the summer and keep fires going in the winter, and are kept going from house to house during most of the twenty-four hours of the day. One of them who is over-enthusiastic in his services to his temperamental employers, undertook the job of protecting a young singer from the boisterous attentions of her erstwhile husband. Her only description of her former violent mate was that he "was old enough to be her father, grey haired and mean looking." Tony Amatto said that was enough and that he would never allow such a person to break in her house under any circumstances. But his devotion went to extremes. Tony is now languishing in jail, and the lovely little singer is held up in a trip to Europe, all because Tony mistook her real father for the brute in question. Tony did not wait to find out the dignified gentleman's identity, but proceeded to remove him bodily from the premises. Now, the father is provoked and will not come across with the promised trip to daughter, and no one can do anything for Tony. The old husband is safe in his amusement.

Dorothy Donnelly of old stage fame in many capacities is the author of the book of the most successful musical comedy of the season so far. The production is called "Poppy" and is the work of Philip Goodman. It boasts of the engaging presence of Madge Kennedy, known for her work in pictures and the stage alike, and of W. C. Fields, of comedy juggling fame with the Follies for several seasons. "It has not been known that Madge Kennedy included musical comedy in her many talents, but it is agreed now that she should have been there long ago. She can sing and dance, and is possessed of the appealing Irish type in beauty. With that, Field's comedy, and a handsome production lay-out, "Poppy" will become the chief item with the ticket speculators.

If you do not believe prosperity is here to stay listen to the words of one of the largest real estate dealers in New York property. "There is a greater demand for the purchase of houses far out, from twenty to thirty thousand dollars in price, than I have ever known in my thirty years on the island. People have a desire to own their own places and are figuring their interest on long rentals in high priced apartments and have decided to make money for themselves rather than the other fellow. Twenty thousand is now regarded as a conservative property for the average citizen." And I can remember in a place not so far from here ten years ago, that a five thousand dollar property was considered a big stake in life.

No wonder O. Henry found so much inspiration in Manhattan. A resourceful interior decorator here has lately spent some time up in New England gathering prize antiques for her little shop and home. She has a penchant for amber glass and discovered some unusual balls of that material with a small opening in the top. She could not figure out what they were used for but conceived the idea of putting a cork in the hole, and suspending them on strings from her windows to get the pleasant reflection through the glass. The first night she had them up she invited a young man to dinner, and could not understand the suddenness with which he bounded from her table to the windows to examine the glass balls. "A look of perplexity and joy came over his face. 'Where did you get them?' She told him. He then pointed out a name blown into the glass which was that of his great grandfather. It seems that his family were claiming the patent right to this particular form of bottle and that it had become very valuable for use with certain chemical fluids requiring a perfectly round amber container. The dispute required the production of one of the bottles they were claiming the right of patent in, and none was to be found, until the heir spied the one at his friend's house. He took it away with him and all is serene, and his gratitude is likely to take on a highly personal character. Is she not responsible for the family fortune?"

BEREAN CLUB CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY

Mrs. J. N. Gibson was hostess Wednesday afternoon when the Berean Club celebrated its tenth anniversary. The home was charmingly decorated with vases of the season's flowers and southern amalia was gracefully festooned on chandeliers and tables.

At three o'clock the president, Mrs. W. H. Ritter, rapped for order and opened the programme with a prayer led by Miss Mattie Banks. The first programme number was a vocal solo by Mrs. Frank Morrow, accompanied by Mrs. A. Z. Kinney. So happily was this number received that Mrs. Morrow favored the club with two more songs.

Miss Elizabeth Wallace entered a much enjoyed instrumental solo. Miss Lulu Garnett gave a reading that everyone appreciated most highly. Then came the feature of the programme. The living room floors were thrown open, exposing a large birthday cake, iced in white and decorated in green candles. A large and in the center representative of the club's president now serving. In the center of which former presidents held office they surrounded the table lighting candles representing the years in which they officiated. Mrs. J. D. McGehee, the first president of the club, gave a brief history of the organization, its purposes and work.

Each president following her with a few remarks. Mrs. A. A. Curry, of Memphis, Tenn., who was absent, sent words of encouragement and love. Mrs. P. Troup closed the programme with "The Good Clubs Do In a Community," and as usual was heard not only attentively, but profitably.

After the service of refreshments, the afternoon closed and was said to have been one of the most beautiful in the club's history.

Mrs. Milton Harvey received arriving members and guests at the door presenting them to those in the receiving line that included the hostess, Mrs. J. N. Gibson, and the former presidents: Mrs. J. W. Jones, Mrs. J. J. Sharp, Mrs. W. H. Ritter and Miss Elizabeth Wallace assisted the hostess.

The following is a list of the presidents who have so capably filled the highest office since the organization of the club: Mrs. D. D. McGehee, two years; Mrs. W. A. Brown, two years; Mrs. W. A. Curry, one year; Mrs. D. J. McGehee, two years (second term); Mrs. C. K. Lide, one year; Mrs. A. L. Blackwell, and F. F. Tidwell serving one year, and Mrs. W. H. Ritter, the present executive.

SECRETARY GREEN VISITS LAWRENCE

Hon. D. F. Green, formerly state superintendent of banks and now the Secretary of the Alabama Baptist Convention, visited relatives here yesterday and left early this morning for Salem church, near Moulton, Lawrence County, where he will attend a two day's session of the Baptist Muscle Shoals Association.

Mr. Green has recently returned from an extended trip to Europe, first going to Stockholm, Sweden, and later visiting England, France, Germany and other countries of Europe.

Mr. Green said he could paint nothing but a very dark picture of the entire continent of Europe, but that the most unhealthy shots were France and Germany. He declared that but for fear of intervention by the United States and England, he believed the Germans would fly again at the neck of the French. He declared that hatred between the two nations was astonishing.

Mr. Green said "Not quoting church leaders, but hard headed bankers, they say that nothing short of a 'new birth' in a religious sense can save the Central part of Europe from destruction."

"I do not believe Europe will ever stage a 'come back,'" declared Mr. Green earnestly. "If Europe ever comes back she will have to be 'brought back' just as truly as was that lost sheep from the dingy and mine."

The returned visitor to Europe said that the farmers were doing well in England, but that few were in that country, and that millions of industrial workers were out of jobs in England. In France all were working but as the French frank was off fully two thirds in value, that what money the workers of France got would not buy much as everything was so expensive. The farm class is being envied and faulted by the salaried and working classes, said Mr. Green, especially in Germany. He declared that the industrial workers in Germany were in terrible plight as they had no work and had no way of buying the products from the German farmers.

Mr. Green said he was in Germany.

have a star if he keeps up the pace he has started. Lacking yet, the finish which will come with greater experience. Zavert is showing signs of developing into all a good high school forward should be. Time and time again he broke through the varsity line yesterday. Spencer is another second stringer who will keep first string men hustling with a little more weight and experience. Thomas is being tried at center, tackle guard and end, showing well at all. He will be a handy utility man to have around.

Big Boy Mitchell, another one of the 175 pound class, was out for the first time yesterday, having been forced by other duties to neglect football some school opened. "Mitch" is expected to rapidly round to form. A half dozen others form the reserve squad which will likely see action against Cullman.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of
Revelations of a Wife

© 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The "Deal" Made with the Janitor's Wife.

AT my proposal to rent the gas stove of my janitor's wife for the preparation of a dinner, Mrs. Schwartz's faded eyes looked quickly, possessively at her gleaming stove, while into them sprang a dreading protective look.

It was almost the glance a fearful mother gives her child when sending it away from her for the first time.

I have seen enough of the effect of loneliness on a certain type of femininity to know that in Mrs. Schwartz's case, the term "household gods" as applied to furnishings was not a misnomer. She had indeed deified her homely possessions, and paid them the worship of constant care. Her children, long since married and gone, the friends of her younger days separated from her by many leagues, she had no other interests than her husband and her belongings.

"What Do You Want to Bake?"

Her eyes came back from her stove and rested on me speculatively. "Yes, I guess I would. I scratch the nickel, or do other damage? The questions were as clear to me as if she had spoken them.

"I will be very, very careful," I pleaded. "I never saw so nicely-kept a stove, but I am sure I will not hurt it."

"Oh, I am not worrying about that," she said with the quick dissimulation of her type. "I was just wondering how much I could help you if I kept sitting down. Your hands don't look used to work."

"But they are," I protested quickly. "I don't mean that I do house work all the time; for I have a maid at home. But here in the city I am doing all my own cooking. However, I do take very good care of my hands. But you must not try to help me; unless you could keep an eye on the oven after the things are in, for fear I might be a few minutes late in coming down to see to them. That is all, however. I will prepare all the things up in my kitchen, and bring them down here ready to pop into the oven. You haven't told me yet how much I am to pay you."

"You will pay me nothing," she said firmly. "Only what the gas comes to. I have got over all figured out to a penny, yet it costs an hour. The gas is all I want. For the rest, you are very welcome. And you need not run down here to watch your things. I can do nothing else to-day, but sit here, and I can watch your stuff. It will give me something to do."

"That—in Dick's slangy parlance—she was 'sold' on the proposition to rent her gas stove, was plainly to be seen, and I experienced an absurd little triumphant thrill at my victory.

"What do you want to bake?" she asked. "Pie? A roast? Have you pans up there?"

"No, I haven't," I confessed, answering the last question first. "And I haven't decided yet just what I am going to have for dinner. I must see what the markets have first. But I know I shall need an oven. I can buy what pans I need, however."

"But that is unnecessary," she protested, horror at waste and loss. "You have a stove, and I have them all here, and you are welcome to use them."

"You are too kind," I expostulated, and indeed I was touched at her response to my request, for I could see a pathetic enthusiasm in my project reflected in her face. That she was already dramatizing it, enjoying it as another woman might a play, I could see, and I finished my sentences in different words than I had planned.

"And I shall be very glad to use your pans," I said. "Now I want your advice. Where is the best place to get fresh roasting chickens?"

For I had remembered suddenly that Dr. Edwin Braithwaite had once praised a roast chicken dinner of mine most unctuously, and had eaten it with enthusiasm. His wife had been less effusive, but she plainly had enjoyed the dinner, while Lillian and Marion—how well I remembered Lillian's frequent comment that in their love for chicken, she and her daughter outwitted the plantation dainties of the South. Roast chicken would be the chief dish of my dinner, I decided that upon the instant, and waited eagerly for Mrs. Schwartz's reply.

"There is but one place anywhere around," she said with decision "and that is six blocks away. But you be sure of them there. I never get them anywhere else."

She gave me careful directions for reaching the place, and I memorized them.

"I will go there as soon as I have looked at the apartment with Mr. Schwartz," I said, and as if the words had been a summons, the rubicund face of the janitor appeared in the doorway.

Dr. W. J. Mayo Makes Exact Statement On Cure of Cancer

ROCHESTER, Minn.—At a meeting of the general staff of the Mayo clinic, held a few days ago, Dr. W. J. Mayo referred to recent newspaper comment on his remarks made with regard to the present status of the cancer problem, quoting him as declaring, in substance, that there was no cure for cancer. In the course of a lecture in London in July Dr. Mayo said, "There is no medical cure for cancer." In other words no medicine taken internally will cure the disease. Continuing he said that a great deal of experimental work was in progress in all parts of the world, all of which gradually was adding important knowledge concerning this serious disease, but, unfortunately, these investigations, which have been made on animals, have not, as yet, any direct application to human subjects.

Dr. Mayo, in his talk to his staff, said that the cure of cancer depends on diagnosis and removal at the earliest possible time. In some manner, the lady must be taught to understand these truths. Experience in the Mayo clinic has been that 71.8 per cent of patients operated on for cancer when the disease is still localized, that is, not extended beyond the primary focus, are cured by operation, and the large majority of the remainder greatly benefited, and many have been cured even when the disease had extended beyond the primary focus.

Surgical operation is the only method of removal to be seriously considered, Dr. Mayo continued, because it permits removal with the growth of surrounding tissues and glands that may have become involved in the disease. The X-ray, radium, and other agents have a field of usefulness, in connection with surgery, but a patient should not be subjected to X-ray, radium or other similar treatment without careful surgical consultation since, if such agents are used while the disease is still local and fail to cure, the resultant tissue changes delay dependable surgical operation and may perhaps prevent it. Radiotherapy and other treatment in the hands of untrained persons, or those whose knowledge is limited to one type of treatment do an enormous amount of harm. Lacking knowledge, these practitioners not able to differentiate and apply the method which experience would show to be the best method suited to the individual patient.

Dr. Mayo now permits these statements to be made public in the hope of correcting an unfortunate impression which has been spread by many newspapers in this country. Since his return from Great Britain he has had an enormous number of letters from persons suffering from cancer, the letters containing clippings from newspapers in all parts of the United States purporting to quote him as saying, "There is no cure for cancer," without reference to his basic statement that surgical removal does cure the disease. What Dr. Mayo actually said was, "There is no medical cure for cancer."

reflected in her face. That she was already dramatizing it, enjoying it as another woman might a play, I could see, and I finished my sentences in different words than I had planned.

"And I shall be very glad to use your pans," I said. "Now I want your advice. Where is the best place to get fresh roasting chickens?"

For I had remembered suddenly that Dr. Edwin Braithwaite had once praised a roast chicken dinner of mine most unctuously, and had eaten it with enthusiasm. His wife had been less effusive, but she plainly had enjoyed the dinner, while Lillian and Marion—how well I remembered Lillian's frequent comment that in their love for chicken, she and her daughter outwitted the plantation dainties of the South. Roast chicken would be the chief dish of my dinner, I decided that upon the instant, and waited eagerly for Mrs. Schwartz's reply.

"There is but one place anywhere around," she said with decision "and that is six blocks away. But you be sure of them there. I never get them anywhere else."

She gave me careful directions for reaching the place, and I memorized them.

"I will go there as soon as I have looked at the apartment with Mr. Schwartz," I said, and as if the words had been a summons, the rubicund face of the janitor appeared in the doorway.

NEED GOOD ROAD BORTON POINTS OUT

L. W. Borton, president of the Decatur Cornice and Roofing Company, accompanied by Mrs. Borton, recently took an automobile trip across the Blue Ridge Mountains into North Carolina, making Tate's Springs their headquarters, and from the splendid hotel there made long trips to a number of points in North and South Carolina, going as far east as the Atlantic coast.

Mr. Borton stated in effect this morning as a summary of the impression the whole trip made upon him, that he felt that if the people here could realize the magnitude of the influence of good means of communication between all parts of the country that if the people knew what a difference it makes on farming and business generally to be able to "get in and out of places easily" there would be such an overwhelming demand for good roads, that they would be built in Morgan County and all over Alabama as if by magic.

"Just take right here at home where the roads are good between here and Marietta, and note the number of good houses that are going up all along."

Mr. Borton stated that the people in all sections of the Carolinas in the mountains and everywhere were making road building a serious business. He said at one point in the Blue Ridge he and Mrs. Borton were held up for three hours, while road builders were blasting along the way.

"To give you an idea of the time saved on good roads," said Mr. Borton, "we drove from Greenville, S. C., to Columbia, the capital city, a distance of 110 miles, in four hours almost 30 miles an hour."

"We drove from Charleston, S. C., to Greenville, a distance of 225 miles from 9 o'clock in the morning to 1 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Road repairs detoured us once, or else we would have made still better time."

"One place to be careful, is when driving along the winding mountain roads, lest some one jump into you. I saw where two automobiles had bumped each other pretty hard. I would always drive slowly in the mountains and keep the horn going as a precaution."

Mr. Borton mentioned Greenville, S. C., as a cotton mill centre, naming exactly the same number of mills there as did W. A. Bibb in his interview in The Daily Wednesday.

Everything Mr. Bibb said about progressiveness in the Carolinas was corroborated by Mr. Borton.

The cotton fields were described by Mr. Borton as "white unto harvest," and that the effects of the leaf worm appeared mostly only the tops of the cotton, the bolls being all right on the main stalk.

The people seemed to be going in for stock, hay, corn and cotton in the farming sections, stated Mr. Borton with apparently as much attention to one crop as the other.

The returning visitor to the Carolinas was enthusiastic in his praise of the hotels, the food served, the reasonable prices and the polite service rendered.

POISON NOT CAUSE OF WOMAN'S DEATH

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Analysis by Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, Bellevue toxicologist, of vital organs from the body of Mrs. Gertrude Orman Webb, whose death at the fashionable Westchester Biltmore country club is being investigated by the grand jury, has shown the presence of a poisonous corrosive sublimate, but not in sufficient quantities to cause death. The New York Sun said it had learned today from a source close to Dr. Goettler.

It was decided to present the toxicologist's report to the grand jury at a conference of officials last night. The grand jury will resume its session at White Plains Monday. Dr. Goettler probably will appear before the jury.

Confirmation of reports yesterday that friends of the dead woman would ask Governor Smith to interfere in the conduct of the investigation came today from persons connected with the case who said that two relatives of Mrs. Webb had gone to Albany to see the governor.

Substitutes are generally more expensive in the end than genuine articles. Housewives have learned—they KNOW this is true where bakings are concerned.

Self rising flours are classed as substitutes for plain flour and good baking powder. The use of these special mixtures is very liable to result in false economy, failures and waste on bake day.

Remember there is a big difference, in many ways, between biscuits and other bakings made from these so-called self-rising flours and those made from good plain flour and a dependable leavener. Try the experiment—make a baking from each—convince yourself.

You will find the baking made from flour and baking powder far more attractive in appearance. It will raise higher—retain its full food value and taste better. For best results, do not fail to use Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, and a reliable brand of plain flour.

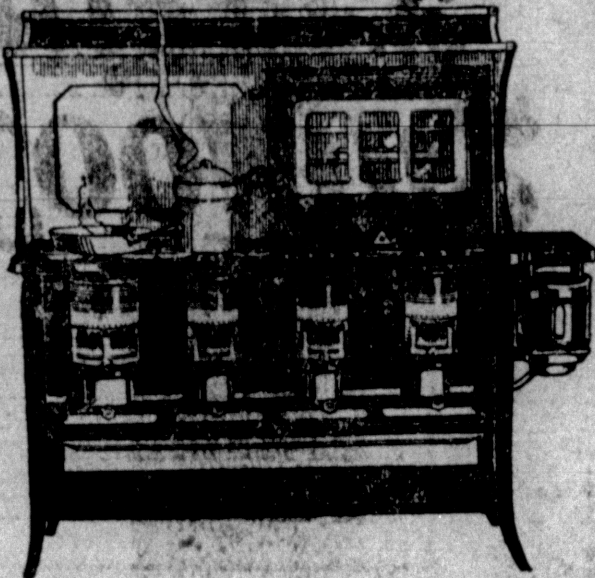

Just think of it—the sale of Calumet is 2½ times as much as that of any other brand. It contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by the United States Food Authorities. It is pure and sure.

You save when you buy it—you save when you use it.
